Needs
Advances in basic and clinical sciences create a need for periodic update among practicing pediatricians. This is borne out by previous participants’ course evaluations, comments made by fellow practitioners, the perceptions of the planning committee, a review of the current literature, and public health priorities.

2005 meeting participants indicated the following topics they wanted to have presented:
• Neonatology: management of breastfeeding and care of the infant in the normal newborn nursery
• Adolescence: adolescent lifestyle and morbidity
• Psychiatry: psychiatric problems in children and adolescents
• Infectious Diseases: new antibiotics/antivirals
• Endocrinology: evaluation and management of polycystic ovarian disease, premature adrenarche, and type II diabetes

A review of the literature and public health priorities reveals many areas in which new disease trends are continuously occurring. The most worrisome for 2006 concerns the potential for avian flu to mutate and disseminate into the human population. Other topics in the medical literature which indicate a need for educational update include:
• benefits of metformin in treating adolescents with polycystic ovary syndrome
• recommended childhood and adolescent immunization schedules
• limiting the use of antibiotics whose spectrum covers intracellular (atypical) pathogens for inpatients with community-acquired pneumonia
• metabolic consequences of childhood obesity
• psychological response to disasters

Based on data acquired from these sources, the planning committee has designed an educational program to help physicians and other healthcare professionals who care for children and adolescents meet their needs for education on these and other topics.

Objectives
At the conclusion of the activity, the participant should be able to:
• Recognize common viral, bacterial, and fungal infections and recommend treatment strategies
• Assess common pediatric endocrine disorders
• Describe common neonatal problems
• Identify common psychological and psychiatric problems in children and adolescents and recommend follow-up
• Discuss common genitourinary and gastrointestinal problems in children
• More effectively interview the pediatric and adolescent patient

Educational Methods
Lectures Audiovisual Aids Question and Answer Sessions Syllabus Panel Discussions

Evaluation
Evaluation by questionnaire will address program content, presentation, and possible bias.
